Why Recommend MagOx® to your Patients?

If any of your patients have these conditions they may have a Magnesium Deficiency:*

- Type 2 Diabetes
- Leg Cramps or Migraines
- Take Electrolyte Depleting RX Drugs
- A Heart Condition
- Excessive Fatigue

(such as loop & thiazide diuretics, digoxin, amphotericin B, aminoglycosides, cisplatin and cyclosporine)

80% of people with Type 2 Diabetes may have a magnesium deficiency and studies show this can be a preceding factor in insulin resistance and hyperinsulinemia.****

- Multiple studies have confirmed that diabetics and non-diabetics with insulin resistance who supplemented with magnesium for three months showed significant positive changes in their Homeostasis Model Assessment for Insulin Resistance (HOMA-IR).**
- A four month clinical study of magnesium supplementation improved insulin sensitivity and lowered fasting glucose levels.**

Studies indicate that magnesium lowers the risk of developing Heart Conditions such as coronary artery disease and abnormal heart rhythms.****

- Magnesium, which acts as a natural calcium channel blocker and vasodilator, may promote myocardial salvage and help patients with mild hypertension.**
- Low magnesium levels may play a significant role in the high prevalence of cardiac arrhythmias and heart failure.**
- Magnesium may be justified as an adjuvant therapy for coronary artery disease patients.**
